

GENE TUNNEY,

Back in Hollywood Dick has called Henson to account for his double-crossing. The big pugilist wants to fight Dick right there and then. Dick is game, but several American Legion boys step between the men and suggest that they fight it out in the roped arena at the American Legion Stadium. Dick takes along some marines for his gallery and Henson rounds up some toughs. Reaching the stadium the two prepare for battle.

Meanwhile Larry and Ruby have reached the mountain cabin and have found that Dick has escaped. They secure a lift in a passing car and hurry to the Chatfield mansion. A few minutes after their arrival Danny, Larry's assistant, rushes in breathlessly. He says that a hostile element among the miners is wrecking Ruby's luncroom and Larry's shop demanding that the owners leave Goldbrook. Larry and Ruby hurry to town.

Dick and Henson are waging a furious fist battle in the Stadium ring. The former has to take a lot of punishment from his strong adversary, but lands telling blows. With a sudden uppercut, Dick lands on Henson's jaw for a knockout. Dick rushes out of the Stadium, engages a fast auto, and races to Goldbrook, and comes into the midst of the street battle.

by Mrs. Gibson, and has known her for ten years.

"This man, who said he was a business man aiding the defense, broke in and tried to learn what Whitaker's relations with Mrs. Gibson had been, and about her previous career. He questioned Whitaker about the paternity of Mrs. Gibson's little daughter, and told him that it was to 'our interests' to make Mrs. Gibson appear 'the biggest liar in the state.'

"Before he left he tried to get Mrs. Latson, who knows absolutely nothing about the case, to sign a paper.

Said He Would Return

Whitaker refused to say anything against Mrs. Gibson, whom he regards highly.

"We learned that the man told Whitaker he would return last night after 6 o'clock, and we sent detectives to New Brunswick.

"They found, however, that the man had waited from 2 in the afternoon until 6, and had then left before Whitaker returned from work."

At the same time Walsh revealed that Jacob Van Pelt, who volunteered the information regarding Ralph V. Gorsline and Catherine Rastall which led to the vestryman's statement regarding the tryst at the murder scene, had been questioned by Edwin Carpender, brother of the defendant Henry.

Asked to Reveal Testimony

Van Pelt is an employee of the Brunswick-Kroschel Refrigerating Company, of which Sidney Carpender, another brother, is the head.

Yesterday, according to Walsh, Van Pelt was called into the head office and asked to reveal everything he told the state's investigators.

When he refused, telling Carpender that such information would have to come from the state, he was excused.
